JORDANALLE

On the west side of Highway #189 in Jordanalle, an attorney of Salt Lake City, Art Halliday built a building for a summer home on the south side of Provo River near the road facing south in 19 .

Later George Borlan Jordan and brother Al as partners purchased the home and built onto it, and made a Dance Hall. Al Jordan was a carpenter and he, later, separated his interest from George and moved to Park City.

So George B and Emma Jordan ran that Dance Hall for awhile. They initiated a competition for townspeople to suggest a name.

Then they leased it to Wes Walters and Jim Maddox.

Utah State Highway #189 was improved in 1953 and a new bridge was built to west of old one.

Joseph Buys ("Brum") Cummings and Mae Jordan Cummings finally took it over.

Wallace Cummings and Jean Murray (sister to Homer) leased it for awhile.

Then Buys and Mae J. Cummings finally sold the Resturant Dance Hall to Howard Jensen and wife Audra.
